It's where you can also view your progress in multi-step editing processes. You can always use your keyboard to navigate Action Pane, but I prefer to use the arrow keys, because I'm a keyboard maestro and I love to move my mouse pointer sometimes too. Using the keyboard you can use the following shortcuts to navigate Action Pane: Arrow keys Navigate up and down. Home and End Navigate left and right. Page Up and Page Down Navigate forward and backward by pages. Using the arrow keys you can use the following shortcut to move between two actions in your Action Pane: Ctrl+Tab to move to next. Ctrl+Shift+Tab to move to previous. To exit Action Pane, press Escape. Here's what the Action Pane looks like: Adjustment Layers Adjustment Layers can be used to apply the same effects to several layers of an image. To create Adjustment Layers: Open a photo in Photoshop Elements. Open the Adjustment Layer panel (Window > Adjustment Layers) and click the Add Adjustment Layer button in the bottom left corner. This application relates generally to cooperative driver assistance systems and methods for cooperative driver assistance systems, and more particularly to cooperative driver assistance systems and methods for cooperative driver assistance systems based on cooperative driver control systems. During an emergency, vehicles are often stopped or are moving very slowly. The occupants of the vehicle are at risk of being hit by other vehicles or by other objects, which may cause personal injury or property damage, or both. In such situations, an autonomous driver in a vehicle may be assigned as a driver assistance system that is capable of assisting the driver of the vehicle. The driver assistance system may include one or more radar systems to detect other vehicles, one or more cameras to detect other objects in the vicinity of the vehicle, and one or more computer systems that combine the received information to detect and to assist the driver. Such driver assistance systems may recognize when the vehicle is stopped, and may take action to warn the driver or to stop the vehicle based on the detected condition. In some instances, the driver assistance system may be in a vehicle, and may detect certain conditions of the vehicle environment, such as a lack of lane markings. However, the operator in the driver assistance system is still in charge of the control of the vehicle, and the driver assistance system is not able to assist the driver in the control of the vehicle unless the driver assistance system obtains the driver's acknowledgment of the driver assistance system and the driver provides his or her control input. The driver assistance system may therefore be considered to be a remote-controlled or automated vehicle, as the driver is still responsible for driving the vehicle. Moreover, the driver assistance system may be aware of certain vehicle control systems, and may be able to affect certain functions of such systems in response to certain events. However, the driver assistance system may be unaware of the operation of the various control systems in the vehicle, which may make it difficult to affect certain functions of the control systems based on events that the driver assistance system is aware of. Accordingly, it would be advantageous to provide a driver assistance system and method that overcomes one or more of the drawbacks identified above. Great, but you now owe me 25$.
